InPost partners with eBay to bring out-of-home delivery directly to UK buyers and sellers for the first time

InPost, the out-of-home delivery and parcel locker leader, today announces a new partnership with eBay, the world's leading marketplace, to give UK buyers and sellers the option to send and receive parcels via InPost Lockers and parcel shop locations directly through the eBay marketplace for the first time.

Locker delivery continues to grow in popularity with UK shoppers, and InPost has doubled parcel volumes year-on-year. The partnership will give eBay's UK customers access to InPost's extensive nationwide locker and parcel shop network as part of eBay's Simple Delivery service, making it easier and more convenient for the millions of people who buy and sell on the marketplace.

eBay shoppers will be able to collect their purchases from the 12,000 InPost Lockers nationwide or one of its thousands of parcel shops, at a time and location that suits them, avoiding missed deliveries and benefiting from secure, 24/7 access.

For sellers, InPost offers an easy and flexible way to send parcels with no queues or restricted opening hours. Sellers can drop off parcels at any InPost Locker or parcel shop nationwide, helping them to fulfil orders efficiently while giving their customers greater delivery choice.

Peter Blackburn, International Commercial Director at InPost UK, commented:

"Partnering with eBay marks another important step in our long-term strategy to make out-of-home delivery the first choice for consumers and retailers across the UK. Through this partnership, we are giving millions of eBay buyers and sellers a new level of convenience and flexibility over how they send and receive their parcels and bringing the strength of our nationwide locker and out-of-home (OOH) network to one of the UK's most established online marketplaces."

Eve Williams, VP and GM of eBay UK, commented: "Making it easier, and as simple as possible, to list and ship items is a priority for our sellers and for eBay. Working with InPost to expand the options available for millions of shoppers across the UK is the latest way we're seeking to enhance the convenience of the eBay experience for our customers."

About InPost

InPost (AEX: INPST) is a leader in logistics solutions for the e-commerce industry in Europe. Founded by Rafał Brzóska, InPost is now a leading delivery platform for e-commerce, which has revolutionised the parcel market in Poland. The first Parcel Locker appeared in Kraków in 2009 and quickly became an indispensable part of online shopping and guaranteed speed and convenience.

Today, the InPost network is Europe's largest and most convenient automated parcel collection and delivery system, with over 57,000 modern APMs and over 33,000 PUDO points in 9 countries (UK, France, Poland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands). InPost has 12,000 APMs across the UK.

InPost also provides courier and fulfilment services to e-commerce sellers, working with around 100,000 e-tailers. During 2024 alone, the company handled over a billion parcels. For years, one of InPost's priorities has been environmental concern. InPost Group's Decarbonisation Strategy is an integral complement to its business strategy. InPost was one of the first in the Polish market to join the SBTi initiative, which aims to achieve NET - ZERO by 2040.
